

THE NEW YORKER

SUBSCRIBE FOR JUST 85¢ AN ISSUE
GIVE A GIFT
RENEW YOUR SUBSCRIPTION
SUBSCRIPTION QUESTIONS

REPORTING & ESSAYS

ARTS & CULTURE

HUMOR

FICTION & POETRY

THE TALK OF THE TOWN

ONLINE ONLY

SUBSCRIBE

ABOUT US

ARCHIVE

STORE

SEPTEMBER 4, 2008

THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL

David Remnick, Ryan Lizza, and Dorothy Wickenden on Sarah Palin and the Democratic Convention.

IN THE NEWS

Elizabeth Kolbert: The risks of rebuilding southern Louisiana, from 2006.

BLOGS

Steve Coll evaluates the man who may succeed Pervez Musharraf this Saturday.

Hendrik Hertzberg remembers the best speech he's ever heard.

The Book Bench: Michael Phelps' memoir, saving Keats, Sarah Palin, and more.

The Cartoon Lounge: Michael Chabon drinks expensive beer, Perez Hilton, and more.

Goings On: Reuben Wilson unsampled, Chaka Khan tries to forget Bush, and more.

George Packer compares Denver to Reagan's 1980 Convention.

Sasha Frere-Jones hums a Labor Day tune.

Dana Goodyear stops to read a missed connection.

SEE ALL BLOGS

THE NAKED CAMPAIGN
Video: Steve Brodner draws Obama the pragmatist.

IN THIS ISSUE
View the table of contents.

CARTOON CAPTION CONTEST

ENTER | VOTE | RESULTS

AUDIO

SHOUTS & MURMURS

MY BILLY

by Paul Rudnick

APRIL 3, 2006

For the first eight years of his life, I was terribly worried about my gifted son, Billy. He had undergone endless testing and visits to hundreds of specialists, and he was eventually diagnosed with A.D.W., or Attention-Deficit What; then A.D.H.S.T., or Attention-Deficit Hyperactivity Stop That; and, after that, A.D.P.O.Y.P., or Attention-Deficit Put On Your Pants. Finally, I realized that Billy is a Dandelion Child, a term used for unusually bright and active children whose special powers will someday change the world.

Shortly after Billy was born, I noticed that he possessed an unusual affinity for organic play, because whenever I took him on picnics he would eat bark. He also demonstrated highly precocious hand-eye coordination, because at only six months old he was able to fling his dirty diapers at strangers, laugh, and point to me. Before his first birthday, he was speaking in complete sentences, although he was using a complex secret language, similar to Karl Rove's.

Billy's early interactions with other children proved difficult, because his consciousness was so much more developed. For example, in the sandbox other children would use their brightly colored plastic shovels to fill their matching buckets with sand. Billy, however, would place his bucket over another child's head and then beat the bucket with his shovel, demanding, "Where's Waldo? I know you know."

I attempted to schedule playdates with other children, tykes who, sadly, insisted on wearing flammable clothing. It was after one such fruitless attempt that I first took Billy to be evaluated by a therapist, a limited woman who prescribed Ritalin, which only caused Billy to become drowsy and disoriented at odd moments, such as when he was hijacking a bus. The therapist asked Billy if he had any siblings, and I remember how his eyes sparkled as he replied, "Don't you read the paper?"

Next, I enrolled Billy in one of the city's finest private preschools for gifted children; during the interview I was especially proud when Billy showed the other children how wooden blocks make love. Unfortunately, even the school's most accelerated programs bored Billy, and he expressed his frustration by crawling around on all fours, grunting and searching for the truffles that he declared some of the little girls had hidden in their underwear. After being expelled, Billy comforted himself by writing a wrenching memoir of addiction, entitled "Boogers."

A series of other schools were equally repressive, and all I kept hearing was "Billy refuses to sit still," "Billy can't interact with a group," and "Billy covered another child with green finger paint and told her that now she could get a scholarship." That was when, thank the Lord, I discovered a Web site for the parents of other extremely advanced children, called AreYourPetsLimping.com. One generous mom suggested that I read two invaluable books by the pioneering child psychologist Dr. Irene Morningflower-Sanctum, entitled "Catching the Gifted Child" and "If He Can Poke, He Can Fly."

These works described the Dandelion Child phenomenon, explaining how a little boy could welcome his visiting grandmother with hugs and kisses and then create a narrative by murmuring, "I'm not Billy. You killed Billy. Don't you

TEXT SIZE: A | A | A
PRINT | E-MAIL | FEEDS

KEYWORDS
Gifted Children; Parents; Attention-Deficit Disorder (A.D.D.); Learning Disabilities; Indigo Children; Dandelion Children; "Where's Waldo?"

SEARCH

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The September 8th issue of The New Yorker.

MOST POPULAR

The Cartoon Lounge: An interview with Perez Hilton.
Ian Parker: Alec Baldwin's displeasure principle.
Philip Gourevitch: What Sarah Palin thinks of Obama.

CARTOONS

Slide show from the current issue.
Ten-second animations of classic cartoons.

THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL

The New Yorker's 2008 election coverage.

Advertisement

SUBSCRIBE TO THE NEW YORKER FOR JUST 85¢ AN ISSUE! CLICK HERE >

ADVERTISER EVENTS & PROMOTIONS

GIVE THE GIFT OF THE NEW YORKER CLICK HERE

RSS FEEDS
Stay up to date on everything happening at newyorker.com.

PRODUCTS & PROMOTIONS FROM THE NEW YORKER

THE NEW YORKER STORE

Order your 2009 Desk Diary. Now available in six vibrant colors.

THE CARTOON BANK

Cartoon and cover art: prints, T-shirts, licensing, and other gifts.

READERLINK & SHOPTYN

Your connection to exclusive events and offers from The New Yorker promotion department, including ShopTNY, AdvanceWord, and more.

AUDIBLE.COM

Subscribe to a weekly audio download of selected articles from the magazine.

THE NEW YORKER ON ITUNES

Download podcasts, events video, audio issues, and animated cartoons at the iTunes music store.

THE FACE OF THE SURGE: Steve Coll on General Petraeus's duties in Iraq and his role in information operations.

Prime Time: Nancy Franklin on the Olympics and her career at The New Yorker.

Emotional Profit: David Grann on a legendary con man and his deceptions.

Head Cold: Jeffrey Eugenides reads Harold Brodkey's short story "Spring Fugue."

The Campaign Trail: David Remnick, Ryan Lizza, and Dorothy Wickenden on the Democratic Convention.

MORE PODCASTS

VIDEO

Not a Game: Scenarios from Virtual Iraq, with commentary by Sue Halpern.

Trapped: The ordeal of Nicholas White, who was trapped in an elevator for forty-one hours.

Abandoned in Baghdad: Scenes from George Packer's play "Betrayed."

remember?"

The term "Dandelion Child" comes from the children's vividly colored auras, which are golden and sunny, and which, if you're not careful, can ruin your lawn. Dandelion Children are so evolved that the rest of us literally can't understand them, and not just because they enjoy tugging panty hose over their heads and announcing, "Look at me, Mommy. I'm a testicle!" As Dr. Morningflower-Sanctum once told me, as we took Billy for a stroll, "Your son has such compassion, far beyond his years. Watch how he leaves that realistic baby doll on a doorstep, rings the doorbell, and runs away. See the elderly couple reading the note? It says, 'Maybe this one will call.'"

Today, I am proud to report that I am homeschooling a happy, healthy, busy little Dandelion marvel, even if, whenever I try to embrace him, Billy still shouts, "Get off me! I'm not one of your husbands!" As Dr. Morningflower-Sanctum said, just the other day, "Let's peek in on Billy in my waiting room. See how he's bonding with my cat? He's teaching her that we're all connected, sometimes with shoelaces. He's an inspiration. He knows." ♦

PRINT | E-MAIL | FEEDS

SHARE:  DIGG |  FACEBOOK |  MORE

CONTACT US RSS FEEDS PRESS CENTER ADVERTISING REPRINTS/PERMISSIONS CAREERS

Stories from the Near Future: Video from the 2008 New Yorker Conference.

The Naked Campaign: Steve Brodner draws the Presidential candidates.

visit our sister sites

CONCIERGE | EPICURIUS | FLIP.COM | MEN.STYLE.COM | STYLE.COM | WIRED.COM | LIPSTICK.COM | NUTRITIONDATA | YM ALLURE | ARCHITECTURAL DIGEST | BON APPÉTIT | BRIDES | CONDÉ NAST PORTFOLIO | COOKIE | DOMINO | GLAMOUR | GOLF DIGEST | GOLF WORLD | GOURMET | LUCKY | MEN'S VOGUE | SELF | TEEN VOGUE | THE NEW YORKER | VANITY FAIR | W

CONDÉNET

Registration on or use of this site constitutes acceptance of our User Agreement and Privacy Policy. NewYorker.com
The material on this site may not be reproduced, distributed, transmitted, cached, or otherwise used, except with the prior written permission of CondéNet Inc.

SLIDE SHOWS

Show People: Rarely seen photographs of entertainers taken by Richard Avedon.

Birds in Flight: A portfolio of sculptural structures by Spanish architect Santiago Calatrava.

Face Value: A slideshow of Max Factor advertisements from the 1930's to the 1960's.

Local Heroes: A selection of paintings by Brooklyn artist Kehinde Wiley.

FIND REVIEWS

Thousands of short takes from the pages of The New Yorker.

- The Film File
- Books Briefly Noted
- Recordings
- Tables for Two

SEARCH

GOINGS ON

Browse listings for what's happening in New York.

GOINGS ON BLOG

NEAR YOU

Françoise Mouly introduces new cartoon books, and more events involving New Yorker contributors.

AWARDS

The New Yorker has won a National Magazine Award for General Excellence.

NEWSLETTER

Links to articles and Web-only features, delivered weekly to your e-mail inbox.

SUBMIT